

2022-04-08 - Lecture 28

8.3 Western Europe after the Roman Empire, c 500-1200

- 1) Western Europe impoverished feudal society - famine, war, political power with warlords or Church Bishops. Dark Ages spanning roughly 476-1000.
- 2) Pilgrimages to Holy Sites
 - 11th and 12th centuries
 - Pilgrimage (1) Jerusalem to see Sepulcher of Christ at Basilica of Holy Sepulcher
 - Pilgrimage (2) Rome to see Crypt of St. Peter
 - Pilgrimage (3) Compostela de Santiago to see Tomb of St. James
 - Pilgrims could gain redemption by visiting Holy Sites.

 - In Rome and elsewhere in Italy we see development of the campanile, a tall bell tower (instead of a westwork as is seen in northern Europe). The campanile was a strong architectural feature that pilgrims could see from very far away, and thereby be directed to the abbey church at their destination.

 - To Compostela there were four major routes through France
 - (1) Via Turonensis - begins at Tour of St. Jacques in Paris
 - (2) Via Lemonicensis - begins at Abbey Ste. Madeleine in Vézelay (Burgundy)
 - (3) Via Podiensis - begins at St. Michel Aiguilhe (san michel agweel) near Le Puy
 - (4) Via Tolosana - begins at Church of St. Trophime in Arles and St. Gilles-du-Gard

 - Road to Compostela a.k.a. The Way of St. James marked along the way by the symbol of St. James - the scallop shell. Symbolism: The lines of the scallop shell indicate many coming from different starting points and converging all to the same destination.

 - The top three routes converged at St. Jean-Pied-de-Port before entering Spain
 - Once in Spain, pilgrims entered upon the Camino Frances (the French Highway) and the fourth route converged with the other three at Puente la Reina.
 - Pilgrims protected by armed Knights from the Poor Fellow-Soldiers of Christ and of the Temple of Solomon - shortened to the Knights Templar. They were organized in 1139 and basically were a militia of the Catholic Church.

 - Along Route (3), pilgrims visited Abbey church Ste. Foy in Conques (khaunk). See image of the tympanum depicting the pilgrimage.
 - Pilgrimage churches modeled after Cluny III
 - Pilgrimage churches had outer aisles - ambulatories and chevets that created an outer ring of circulation so that the priest's services and the choir would not be disturbed by the constant flow of pilgrims.
 - Upon arriving at Santiago de Compostela, pilgrims entered through the Portico de la Gloria on the west side finished in 1180.
- 3) Crusades to Middle East
 - End of 11th Century
 - Unification of Christendom through fighting common enemy in Palestine where Muslims had ruled for 400 years (since establishing Dome of the Rock on the Jewish Temple Mount)
 - Pope Urban II calls for a liberation of Jerusalem (1095)
 - 100,000 Knights muster in Constantinople to march to Palestine (1097)
 - Knights conquer Jerusalem and kill all the Jews and Muslims (1099)

 - To consolidate power 50 castles were built, such as formidable Krak de Chevaliers (Castle of the Knights or Castle of the Cavaliers) in modern-day Syria. Controlled by another group of knights called the Hospitallers until 1271
 - glacis were slippery slopes
 - bastions were round defensive pieces
 - battlements
 - merlins were the positive masonry bits rising above the top of the wall
 - crenels were the negative spaces between each merlin
- 4) Frederick II (ruled 1220-1250)
 - Holy Roman Emperor and King of Jerusalem
 - Strong vision of renovatio romanae imperii
 - Imperial Palace in Prato 1238 (Italy - north of Florence)
 - perfect square geometry with symmetrical towers at corners and midpoints
 - battlements made of Ghibelline merlins
 - Castel del Monte in Puglia 1240 (Italy - south near the heel of the boot)
 - perfect octagonal geometry
 - ambitious synthesis of religious and secular form. A powerful large form normally reserved for religious institutions now used for a palace or castle

- reminiscent of the Dome of the Rock and comparable to Pantheon